Pastor's Message / Mensaje del Pastor

The servants went out into the streets and gathered all they found, bad and good alike, and the hall was filled with guests. (Matt 22:10)

We serve a God who first served us. Everyone loves a feast, and that was as true in ancient times as it is now. The feasting continues in Jesus' parable, which uses the image of a king providing a wedding feast for a son - perhaps the most extravagant image that could have been chosen at that time and place - to place before us the shocking reality that we do not always accept God's abundance. Sometimes we are too busy with our material lives - our cares, our worries - to accept the invitation to the banquet, or even to notice that we are constantly being invited.

And so the banquet hall will be filled not necessarily with the most virtuous, or the most powerful leaders, or those of us who come to church every Sunday, but with those who are merely willing to hear and accept the invitation. This gives us a reason to rejoice, for in other words, none of our imperfections or failings are a barrier to God sharing his abundance with us.

In a homily in 2021, Pope Francis assured us, "The Eucharist is not the reward of saints, no, it is the bread of sinners." May we now come together to this greatest of feasts at Christ's table, accepting the invitation to share in God's lavish abundance so we may go out and lavishly share it with all.

My God will fully supply whatever you need, in accord with his glorious riches in Christ Jesus. To our God and Father, glory forever and ever. Amen. (Phil. 4:20)

* * * * *

Los sirvientes salieron a las calles y reunieron todo lo que encontraron, malos y buenos por igual, y el salón se llenó de invitados. (Mateo 22:10)

Servimos a un Dios que primero nos sirvió a nosotros. Todo el mundo ama una fiesta, y eso era tan cierto en la antigüedad como lo es ahora. La fiesta continúa en la parábola de Jesús, que utiliza la imagen de un rey que ofrece una fiesta de bodas para un hijo, quizás la imagen más extravagante que podría haber sido elegida en ese momento y lugar, para poner ante nosotros la impactante realidad de que no siempre aceptamos la abundancia de Dios. A veces estamos demasiado ocupados con nuestras vidas materiales -nuestras preocupaciones, nuestras preocupaciones- para aceptar la invitación al banquete, o incluso para darnos cuenta de que estamos siendo invitados constantemente.

Y así, el salón de banquetes se llenará no necesariamente con los líderes más virtuosos, o los más poderosos, o aquellos de nosotros que venimos a la iglesia todos los domingos, sino con aquellos que simplemente están dispuestos a escuchar y aceptar la invitación. Esto nos da una razón para regocijarnos, porque en otras palabras, ninguna de nuestras imperfecciones o fallas es una barrera para que Dios comparta su abundancia con nosotros.

En una homilía en 2021, el Papa Francisco nos aseguró: "La Eucaristía no es la recompensa de los santos, no, es el pan de los pecadores". Que ahora nos reunamos a esta mayor de las fiestas en la mesa de Cristo, aceptando la invitación a compartir la abundancia generosa de Dios para que podamos salir y compartirla generosamente con todos.

Mi Dios proveerá plenamente todo lo que necesites, de acuerdo con sus gloriosas riquezas en Cristo Jesús. A nuestro Dios y Padre, gloria por los siglos de los siglos. Amén. (Filipenses 4:20)

St. Teresa of Avila

By Marylu Mariniello

St. Teresa of Ávila, also called St. Teresa of Jesus, was a Carmelite nun and prominent Spanish mystic and religious reformer who was active during the Counter-Reformation. She became the central figure of the movement of monastic renewal, reforming the Carmelite Orders of both women and men. This movement was later joined by a younger Carmelite friar and mystic John of the Cross, with whom she established the Discalced Carmelites.

Teresa Sánchez de Cepeda Dávila y Ahumada was born on March 28, 1515 in Avila, Spain. Her paternal grandfather, Juan Sánchez de Toledo, was a “marrano” a Jew forced to convert to Christianity or emigrate. When Teresa's father was a child, he was condemned at the Spanish Inquisition for returning to Judaism, but later resumed becoming a Catholic. He was a successful wool merchant and one of the wealthiest men in Ávila, becoming a knight, assimilating into Christian society. Her father was previously married with three children and then married Teresa's mother, Beatriz de Ahumada y Cuevas. Her mother brought her up as a dedicated Christian. Teresa was captivated by the lives of the saints, causing her to run away from home at the age of seven to become a martyr, fighting the Moors. She left with her brother, but their uncle brought them home. Her mother died when Teresa was eleven years old, which devastated her. This led her to embrace a deeper devotion to the Blessed Mother as her spiritual mother. On the secular side, she also loved popular fiction, including medieval tales about knights and stories about fashion, gardens and flowers.

Teresa was sent to the Augustinian Convent school in Ávila. When she finished her studies, she resisted the idea of a religious vocation, but then chose this path after a stay with her uncle and other relatives. In 1534, at the age of twenty, she decided to enter the local Carmelite Convent of the Incarnation, built on top of land that had been used previously as a burial ground for Jews. Her father was not happy about her vocation.

She liked to read about contemplative prayer, especially Osuna's “Abecedario spiritual” (“Third Spiritual Alphabet,” 1527), a guide on the examination of conscience. She also practiced “spiritual self-concentration and inner contemplation” and read other mystical ascetical works such as the “Tractatus de oratione et meditatione” of Peter of Alcantara, which brought her to perform mortification, causing her to become sick, spending almost a year in bed. Everyone was upset and worried because Teresa almost died. She recovered and attributed her healing to the intercession of St. Joseph.

Then she began to experience bouts of ecstasy, reporting that she had progressed from the lowest stage of “recollection” to the “devotions of silence” and even to the “devotions of ecstasy”, which was perceived as “the perfect union with God.” She started to understand the distinction between mortal and venial sins and the horror and intrinsic nature of original sin, causing her to become conscious of her own natural impotence in confronting sin and her need for absolute surrender to God. Teresa received a copy of the Spanish translation of St. Augustine of Hippo's autobiographical work “Confessions”, which helped her to resolve and manage her own sessions of religious ethics, making her realize that holiness was possible. She found solace that such a great saint was once an inveterate sinner. In her autobiography, she wrote that she “was very fond of St. Augustine [...] for he was a sinner too.”

Her convent had a laissez faire attitude, which prompted Teresa to create a “reformed” Carmelite convent, correcting the laxity that she experienced. The new convent, established in 1562 and named for St. Joseph, was impoverished. This caused a scandal among the people, with the small house and chapel almost being closed down, but the bishop gave his approval for their order. In March 1563, when the new convent house was established, Teresa received a Papal Sanction for her principles of absolute poverty and the renunciation of ownership of property. This was formulated into a “constitution”. Her plan was the stricter monastic rules, supplemented by the three disciplines of flagellation every week and the discalceation of the religious, meaning “removal of footwear.”

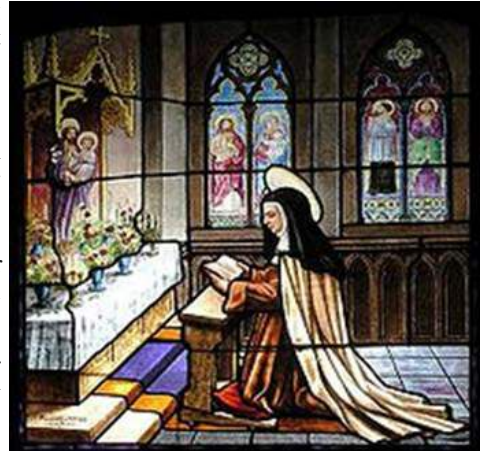

For the next five years, Teresa remained in seclusion, mostly praying and writing. She wrote her autobiography, “The Life of Teresa of Jesus”, “The Interior Castle” and “The Way of Perfection”, which are major works on Christian mysticism and meditation. In 1567, Teresa received a patent from the Carmelite General to establish further houses of the new order, which involved a lot of traveling. She was given permission to set up two houses for men. Two Carmelite friars, John of the Cross and Anthony helped with this, founding the monastery of Discalced Carmelite Brothers in November 1568 at Duruelo. John of the Cross would also become a saint.

In 1576, unreformed members of the Carmelite order began to persecute Teresa, her supporters and her reforms. They forbade all further founding of reformed convents, telling her to go into “voluntary retirement,” which she did. After years of letters to King Philip II of Spain, the reforms were resumed. During the last three years of her life, Teresa founded several convents, seventeen in total. In 1580, a formal papal decree adopting the split from the old order was issued.

Teresa died in 1582 and was buried at the Convento de la Anunciación in Alba de Tormes.

She was canonized by Pope Gregory XV in 1622 and Pope Paul VI proclaimed her a Doctor of the Church on September 27, 1970. St. Teresa of Avila is the patron saint of chess and headaches and copatron of Castile. Her symbols are a heart, an arrow and a book. She is also known as “The Roving Nun.” Her feast day is October 15.

This is her quote: “The closer one approaches to God, the simpler one becomes.”
